In Search of Significance
With Your Kids:
5 Things You Must Do

A. The question is not where you are on the age-range spectrum of life, but what you are doing (regardless of age) to capture significance. It's not counting your days, but making your days count.

1. Most want a life that has meaning and purpose. But how?
2. Book recommendation? _____ - It will give you a reason to live, life clarity, ignite your passion, and give you a purpose for getting up each day. Inside these pages you will learn the secret to living is to live _____.

B. Matthew 19:16-21

1. Why did Jesus tell him that?
2. Sadly, his mindset is the way many people live: What's in it for me?

I. The Search for Life Significance Starts At An Early Age

A. It's helping our kids (from their formative years) learn the meaning of life.

1. Help to establish their conscience-foundation.
2. Help to steer them to the importance of meaningful work.
3. Help to show them the importance of relationships—that people are important.
4. Help to give them a cause to embrace bigger than self (a way to give back).
5. Help them to find their own faith in God (Eccl.12:13-14).

B. Micah 6:8

1. Where will our kids learn this? Deut.6:7-9
2. Sadly, kids are plugged-in and turned-out at an alarming rate.

II. What Kind of Example Are You Setting?

A. Deut.6:4-6

B. Moses—Don't let the Canaanite culture take control of your kids!

III. Five Things We Can Do To Build Significance with Our Kids:

A. _____.

B. Disconnect (or limit) their connection with _____.

C. _____ as a family.

D. Don't _____.

E. Get _____ and do something together.
